AUSTIN-MAGIE FARM

A National Historic Property owned by Miami University and home to the Institute for Food farm. In 1815, Aaron Austin built Oxford Township's largest mill complex, which included a flourmill and a sawmill, on the property. Austin built the extant Federal-style brick farmhouse in 1841. The subsequent owner, David M. Magie, was one of Ohio's most prominent 19th century stock farmers and swine breeders. During the second half of the 20th century, the farm was owned and operated by John Felix Fryman who was instrumental in placing the property on the National Register of Historic Places. Interior not accessible to the public.
5526 Morning Sun Rd. • Oxford, OH 45056

THE INSTITUTE FOR FOOD AT MIAMI UNIVERSITY

The Institute for Food is a Provost Interdisciplinary Innovation project to engage the Miami University community around issues of food, health, and sustainable agriculture. Its mission is to foster healthy food, healthy eating, healthy communities, and a healthy planet. Located on part of the historic Austin-Magie Farm, the farm serves as an experiential learning center, a field laboratory, and an intensive vegetable production farm that offers a seasonal CSA to the Miami community. The Institute for Food farm is located at the corner of Morning Sun and Somerville Roads in Oxford, Ohio. Fieldtrips and tours are available by appointment. Information is provided on the Institute for Food website.
